What is a cold or a flu?

A cold is an affliction of the upper respiratory tract which lasts for about five to ten days. The common cold is caused by certain pathogens, usually viruses. The name "cold" refers to the fact that the affliction often develops after one has become thoroughly chilled. Such cooling can weaken the body's defense mechanisms and make it more susceptible to pathogens of all kinds. Influenza (or common flu) is the general term for a feverish ailment which arises from various causes. Such an infection almost always involves the upper respiratory tract (cough, head cold, sore throat). The lower respiratory tract can also be affected. The susceptibility for colds and flu is largely determined by the immune system. However, the effective functioning of the immune system depends not only on physical health, but also on one's emotional or psychological well-being.

How do Heel homeopathic products work?

Heel products contain multiple homeopathically-prepared active ingredients. As "antihomotoxic" products, these represent a particular form of complex homeopathic preparations which were developed by Dr. H.-H. Reckeweg. Dr. H.-H. Reckeweg recognized that diseases primarily develop when the body has been overtaxed by contaminants and pathogens (the so-called homotoxins = "human toxins"), and is attempting to rid itself of these harmful influences. Reckeweg called his theory of disease "Homo-toxicology" (the science of human toxins). The treatment with Heel products stimulates the immune system and activates the body's own defense mechanisms to remove toxic agents and pathogens – this is the first crucial step towards healing. The finely balanced homeopathic agents act to stimulate the body to heal itself by producing antibodies. The Heel homeopathic products have the advantage that they do not suppress pathological symptoms, and hence block the activity of the body's defence mechanisms, and they also do not burden the body with even more toxic agents.

Therefore a therapy using Heel homeopathic products helps the body to heal itself.

Can Heel products also be administered to children?

Especially in the case of children, it is of vital importance to use well-tolerated and low-risk products, in order to avoid an unnecessary toxic burden. The Heel homeopathic products mentioned in this brochure fully meet this demand and are particularly well suited for effective administration to children. As a rule children tend to respond most effectively to the delicate stimulation of Heel products.

Important information:

When using Heel homeopathic products, please note to the unique characteristics of this treatment method. As explained, Heel products activate the body's own defence mechanisms and hence improve natural bodily functions. It is in the nature of homeopathy that a certain "start-up" time may be required before the body's own regulatory mechanisms respond to the careful balance of active agents.

If you require assistance in selecting the appropriate Heel products, or if you are pregnant or lactating, always consult your pharmacist for expert advice. If your symptoms persist always consult your physician.
